Unemployment and responsibility: When to carry the weight, and when to drop it

By David Junias

At the 5th APRM Youth Symposium, Dr Nkosazana Dlamini Zuma, the third Chairperson of the African Union Commission, delivered a message that should sweep through Africa's youth spaces like a wind of change and a timely reminder.

With conviction and clarity, she reminded young Africans that nobody gets invited to a revolution. The youth, she said, must willingly and deliberately join the skills revolution to industrialise Africa.

Her words were a call to arms of no violence, but of a collective purpose of Africa. She spoke passionately about a skills revolution, urging young people to equip themselves with the tools to lead Africa's transformation.

Yet, beneath her speech lay a deeper question that touches millions of young Africans every day: when is it fair to feel bad about being unemployed, and when is it not?

Unemployment often carries emotional weight. Society expects people without jobs to feel ashamed, to apologise for their circumstances, as though being unemployed is a reflection of laziness or failure. But that view ignores the realities facing many of Africa's young people.

The truth is that many are jobless not because they lack effort or ambition, but because the systems meant to support them are not working.

The truth is that many are jobless not because they lack effort or ambition, but because the systems meant to support them are not working.

The economy does not create enough jobs.

ENVIRONMENTAL AND SOCIAL IMPACT ASSESSMENT (ESIA) AND PUBLIC PARTICIPATION PROCESS DEVELOPMENT OF THE KAVANGO LINK PIPELINE TO SECURE WATER SUPPLY TO THE CENTRAL AREA OF NAMIBIA (CAN)

RFM Consulting cc, acting on behalf of Namibia Water Corporation Ltd (NamWater), hereby informs all Interested and Affected Parties (I&APs) that the National Public Consultation meeting initially scheduled for Friday, 14 November 2025 has been rescheduled to Monday, 1 December 2025. PURPOSE OF THE CONSULTATIONS
As part of the ESIA process, public consultations are being held to share project information, identify potential environmental and social impacts, and obtain inputs from stakeholders before finalisation of the assessment. The national consultation meeting provides the public an opportunity to engage directly with the project team.
